Andy P Otz

Be regular and orderly in your life, so that you may be violent and original in your work.
—Flaubert

Speak, so that I may see you.
—Socrates

It was regarded as an evidence of bravery for a man to go into battle carrying no weapon that would do any harm at a distance.
—George Bird Grinnell

The dead look terribly dead when they're dead.
—Somerset Maugham, The Razor's Edge

The Eskimos say, "Let the person who wants a vision hang himself by his neck. When his face turns purple, take him down and have him describe what he's seen."
—quoted in Jerome Rothenberg's Shaking the Pumpkin

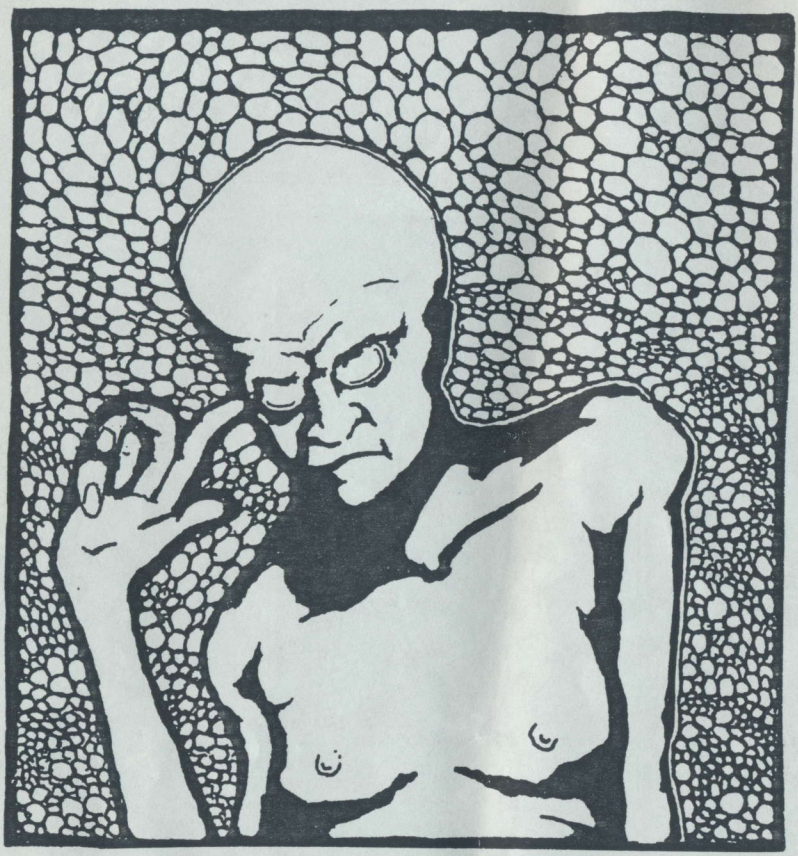
I cannot help thinking about someone like Howard Hughes—one of the richest men in the world who died of neglect and lack of proper medical attention. Or John Paul Getty, a billionaire who refused to pay a ransom for his own grandson and kept payphones in his mansions . . . Surely living for oneself, amassing individual wealth or fighting to stay on top of the pack is no way to live. Your personality and your worth become defined by what you own rather than by what you are . . . Life without principle is devoid of meaning. We have tasted life based on principle and now have no desire to ever live otherwise again. You do not know what happiness is until you have lived up to your highest.

—Rev. Jim Jones



In an unforgettable ceremonial manner, he is taken from the camp and scenes of his irresponsible early years. He becomes the subject of a series of rites . . . He 'dies' to the former life of childhood and of ignorance of esoteric knowledge, and 'rises' or is 'reborn' to a new life. The latter is not merely adult life, for which he has meanwhile been disciplined and instructed; it is much more: it is a life of knowledge and power. At the end of the ritual journey, with its trials, loneliness, 'death', revelations and rejoicing, he can say: "Whereas previously I was blind to the significance of the seasons, of natural species, of heavenly bodies and of man himself, now I begin to see; and whereas before I did not understand the secret of life, now I begin to know."

—A.P. Elkins, Aboriginal Men of High Degree, 1946

He was considered by his countrymen a perfect master in the art of tattooing . . . I was astonished to see with what boldness and precision Aranghie drew his designs upon the skin, and what beautiful ornaments he produced; no rule and compasses could be more exact than the lines and circles he formed . . . Indeed, so highly were his works esteemed, that I have seen many of his drawings exhibited after death. A neighbor of mine very lately killed a chief who had been tattooed by Aranghie; and, appreciating the artist's work so highly, he skinned the chieftain's thighs, and covered his cartouche-box with it.

—Augustus Earle, Narrative of a Nine Months' Residence in New Zealand in 1827

A person can't be creative and conformist at the same time.
—Ibid

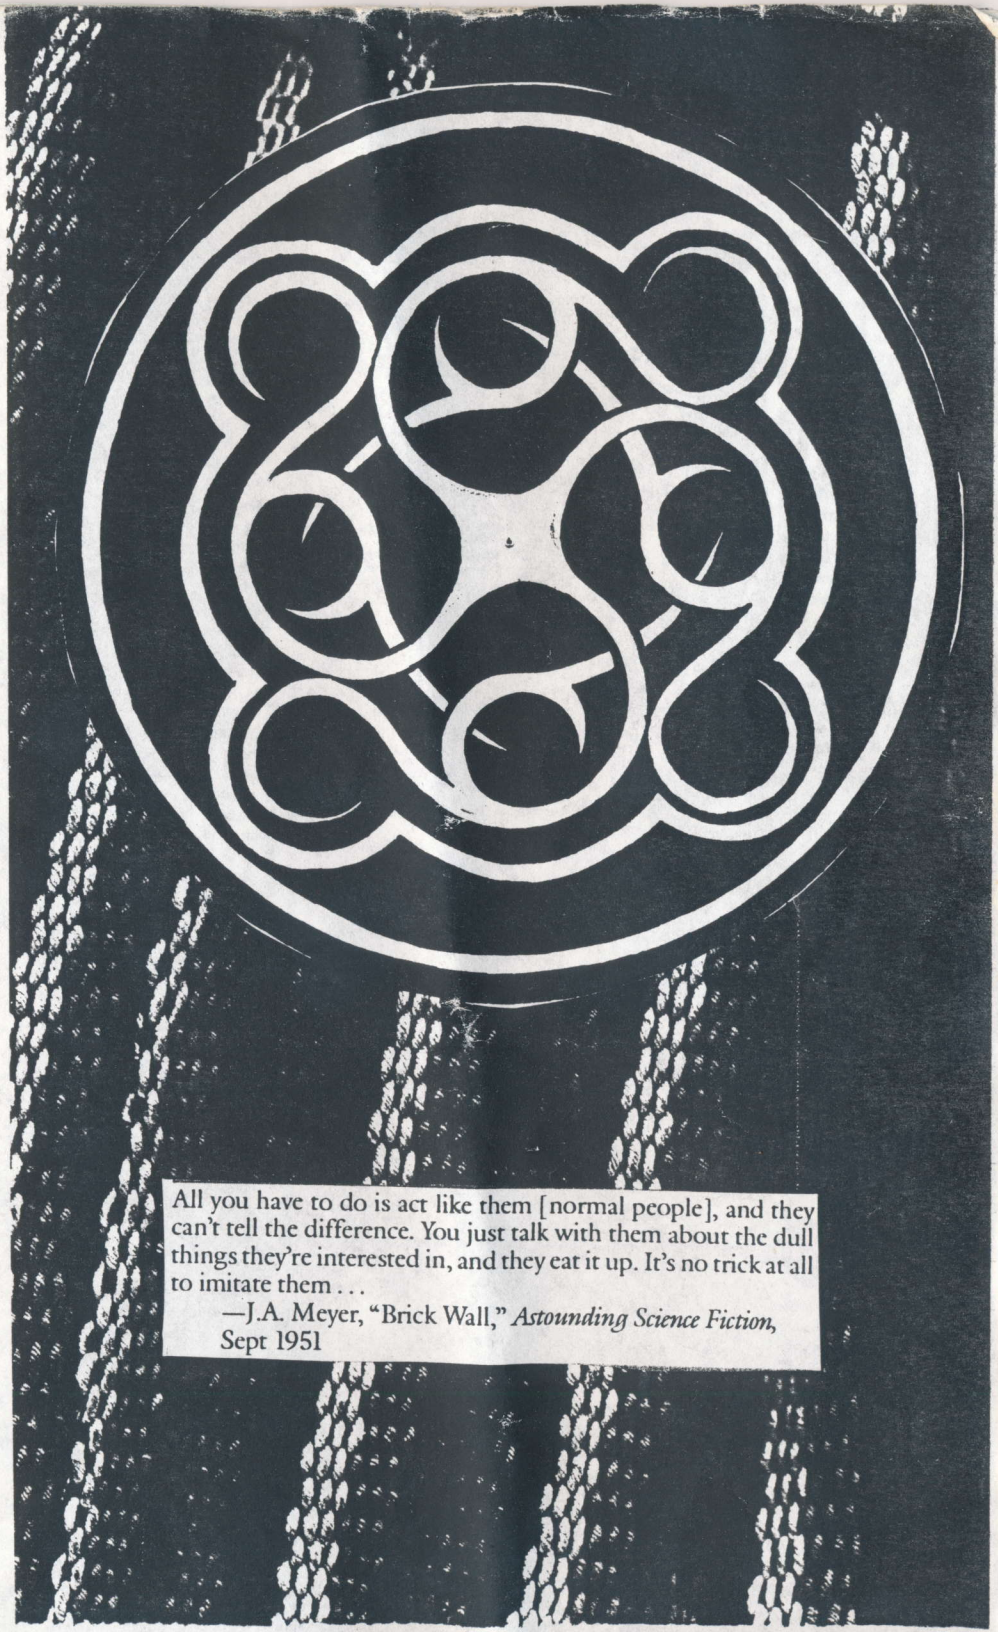
The only difference between tattooed people and non-tattooed people is: tattooed people don't care if you're not tattooed.
—Cheri



All you have to do is act like them [normal people], and they can't tell the difference. You just talk with them about the dull things they're interested in, and they eat it up. It's no trick at all to imitate them . . .

—J.A. Meyer, "Brick Wall," Astounding Science Fiction, Sept 1951

Maze: Get from an outer dot to the other.

Human life is an experience to be carried as far as possible.
—Georges Bataille, Theory of Religion

I look about me at my fellow men. And I go in fear. I see faces keen and bright, others dull or dangerous, others unsteady, insincere; none that have the calm authority of a reasonable soul. I feel as though the animal was surging up through them ... I know this is an illusion, that these seeming men and women about me are indeed men and women, perfectly reasonable creatures, full of human desires and tender solicitude, emancipated from instinct. ...H.G. Wells, Ibid

p. 21

Mana is the principle of magic; it is the latent power in a person, a thing, even in a word. He who can evoke this energy and make it serve his ends is a clever man. In modern language, this means that there are reserves of force everywhere and that we should use them for our needs . . .

—Reinach, Orpheus

It's the curse of our society that we have to fit into a rigid pattern to belong . . . There's no room for imagination and creativity in our society, except in art and literature—dead ends!
